

Strategies to Stay Current in Your Field

Product	Information
eTOC (Electronic Table of Contents Alerts)	Many journals allow for the ability to set up alerts for their table of contents. Each time a new issue is published, an alert will be sent to your email address. The articles will be hyperlinked and users will be taken to the website. The full text may not be accessible from this website. Full text can be retrieved by searching for the content in McMaster's collection and logging in with your MacID and password.
ACCESSSS	McMaster University's Health Information Research Unit has collaborated with evidence resources to provide users with access to current best evidence from research. Users can sign up for alerts using the ACCESSSS link (same information, different branding). Sign up for alerts here: https://www.accesssss.org/ (Note: a personal user account is required)
PubMed Saved Searches	PubMed has the ability to allow users to save searches and receive updates on the latest literature. For information on how to do this visit: https://www.nlm.nih.gov/bsd/disted/pubmedtutorial/040_015.html (Note: users must create a NCBI account)
Feedly	Feedly is a news aggregator application for various web browsers and mobile. It compiles news feeds from a variety of online sources for the user to customize and share with others. Create a free account here: http://www.feedly.com
Google Alerts	The service sends emails to the user when it finds new results—such as web pages, newspaper articles, blogs, or scientific research—that match the user's search term(s). Create an alert here: https://www.google.ca/alerts
Medscape	Medscape is a free website providing access to medical information for clinicians. Medscape allows for registrants to sign up for newsletters in their field of interest.
